Our army, experimenting theoretically with bombing planes over Mitchell Field, found it easy to destroy that "bulwark of the aerial defense of New York city." The air field was "theoretically destroyed," and "the fireproof hangars and barracks, constructed at a cost of nearly $5,000,000, were all theoretically wiped out."

If real war came and this country were found unprepared as it is now, there would be nothing "theoretical" about the "wiping out" and foreign bombers would not limit their activities to the Mitchell air field. They would move on to New York, Washington, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston and other more important points. This has been said often but, apparently, not often enough.

Eastern people are supposed to be "impulsive," all emotion controlled, Japanese especially; and they are, as we see them here. At home it is otherwise. Colonel Abrams, who was named General Nagata "for the good of the Emperor," he said, burst into tears, at his trial twice in one day, once when the prosecutor showed him letters written by two young school girls in their own blood, demanding his acquittal. Ladies here sometimes sympathize with criminals, send them flowers, but never write about it in their own blood. The East feels intensely.

American financial enterprises seem to be almost as "far flung" as the Japanese Imperial battle line. In China, Mr. F. H. Raven, born in California, married the "daughter of a wealthy missionary family." You wonder how the missionary family got the money and then follow Mr. Raven as he builds up gigantic financial institutions in China; the American Oriental Banking Corporation, the American Oriental Finance Company, the Raven Trust Company, the Asia Realty Company, etc. They have all crashed together, depositors lost their money, and the East feels intensely.

It is easy enough here at home, but it must take unusual ability to go and do it in China, in the Chinese language. Of Mr. Raven it must be added that he always "continued to engage in church activities."

The wise British, playing chess with continental powers as chessmen, suddenly turn, with affectionate interest, to Russia. Her building of airplanes and submarines and her standing army of 1,300,000 men, well armed, interest the British. Mr. Eden even favors a British government loan, plus commercial credit, for Russia. While polite with Germany, England thinks that close relations with Russia might check Germany usefully.

How soon will Japan and Russia settle their misunderstandings? Japan now admits a rebellion among her Manchurian subjects, ten Japanese soldiers killed.

After Japan's Manchurian and Chinese subjects revolt in Manchuria, they simply change the border into Russia where Japan cannot get them; most annoying for the Japanese diabolists.

Yesterday was groundhog day, when, tradition says, the groundhog comes out of his hole. If the sun is shining and he sees his shadow, he goes back to stay six weeks longer. In New York, where this is written, there was enough sunshine, cold weather and snow to send the groundhog back into his hole.

Tradition, a little loose, does not say just where the groundhog is supposed to live. In California, along the Gulf coast and in Texas, the groundhog play out of his hole all the year 'round.

In Mexico, oil workers on strike have an imagination that might appeal to strikers elsewhere, if the courts would oblige. Mexico's strikers, including those working on American and foreign foreign enterprises walk out, work shuts down, and the Mexican courts decide that employers must pay full wages to 46 per cent of the strikers "to look after the properties of the fact that owners would rather look after their own properties in their own way makes no difference.

Buyers for New York houses may find in Seattle samples of "the perfect wool in the world," made from the wool of the musk-ox. Musk-oxen are not plentiful and the young American gentleman who likes to be "different" on the outside of his back of his head, could be proud of a musk-ox muffler.

2 Girls Save 'Gil' Dobie Named Boston College Coach

PATRICIA ANNE GROSSA NORMA GROSSA
When fire broke out in their home in Franklin street, Stoneham, today, the first thing that Patricia Anne, 8, and sister, Norma, 5, did was to pick up their dollies. Then they rushed out in the cold to watch the firemen put out the blaze and rescue two of their neighbors and playmates.

AMHERST STUDENT KILLED IN MYSTERY

Northampton, Feb. 3.—The broken body of a missing Amherst College student, Francis Gross, 21, a member of a wealthy New York family, was found today on the ice of the Connecticut river.

The vital organs are being sent to Harvard Medical School for an autopsy, because of circumstances which puzzled police and Medical Examiner Thomas F. Corridan.

Examination of the body revealed several fractures of the skull, 13 broken ribs, a punctured lung, ruptured kidneys and fractured hip.

The body was found under a railroad bridge, but no train had passed over this bridge between the

ROOSEVELT ASKS REPEAL OF 3 ACTS

Washington, Feb. 3 (INS)—President Roosevelt in a surprise message to Congress this afternoon recommended immediate repeal of the Bankhead Cotton Control Act, the Kerr-Smith Tobacco Act and the Potlato Act of 1935.

The executive explained he was making the recommendations because of termination of the AAA program, to which these three acts were auxiliary.

The AAA was pronounced unconstitutional by the Supreme Court four weeks ago today, and the Court clearly indicated in that decision that it would rule out these auxiliary acts when the occasion presented itself.

By his action today, President Roosevelt evidently decided to beat the court to it.

The President's message to Congress follows:

"I recommend to the Congress the prompt repeal of the act of April 21, 1935, as amended, known as the Bankhead cotton act; the act of June 13, 1935, as amended, known as the Kerr-Smith tobacco act; and of title 2 of the act of Aug. 24, 1935, known as the Potlato act of 1935."

"This recommendation is made because of the termination of the program of agricultural production adjustment under the act of May 12, 1933, as amended, known as the 'Agricultural adjustment act' in which the three acts mentioned were auxiliary."

B. C. NAMES 'GIL' DOBIE AS GRID COACH

Gilmore "Gloomy Gil" Dobie, who resigned as head coach of football at Cornell, has agreed to take over the football destinies at Boston College, John Curley, graduate manager of athletics, announced today.

The agreement is verbal, Curley said, but the papers will be signed later.

Boston College becomes the fifth college at which Dobie has given his coaching genius during the past 31 years. Three years after graduating at University of Minnesota, where he starred as a quarterback, Dobie entered his coaching career at North Dakota Agricultural College.

From there he went to University of Washington. Later he coached at the United States Naval Academy and then went to Cornell, where he had been for 10 years until his resignation Saturday.

The agreement was reached in a telephone conversation between Curley and Dobie today, Curley announced.

Dobie succeeds Harry Downes, who finished out the coaching season last year after John R. "Dinny" McNamara resigned.

Curley said Dobie will arrive in Boston within two weeks and that he contemplated no changes in the coaching personnel. This was taken to mean that Downes would probably assume his former position as line coach, and that Bill Ormsby, end coach, would be retained.

Neutralities Bill Hit by Johnson

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Feb. 3.—A bitter, wide-open fight raged over pending neutrality legislation in the Senate today, as insurgents led by Senator Hiram Johnson (R., California), launched a stinging onslaught against the administration measure.

Johnson, who has availed himself of the Senate foreign relations committee doors for three weeks, brought his attack into the open with publication of the stinging denunciation of the legislation by John H. Mott, world-renowned authority on international law.

Johnson pictured the administration bill as complete dictatorship, and said it was a "serious threat to the liberties of the American people."

Publication of the Mott opinion, which was originally given to the Foreign Relations Committee in secret session, came at a time when strong sentiment was building up for the bill.

BOSSE DEATH STORY TOLD BY SUSPECT

A story of suicide told by a man held on suspicion of murder today baffled police investigating the mystery death of Mrs. Mildred W. Bosse, 28, of Upland road, Dorchester.

Mrs. Bosse, wife of Clifford Bosse, night club proprietor, and mother of two children, was found dead on her bed a week ago yesterday. An autopsy, still in progress, police said, has revealed cyanide in her organs.

The man held, arrested Saturday night had previously told police he visited the woman at her home on the day of the death and left her alive, in good health, although despondent.

Fish, Bread Carried to Marooned

Airplanes rushed food and mail today from Boston and Cape Cod points to Nantucket Island, where 300 inhabitants are facing an emergency due to ice formed by this season's most prolonged cold spell in 15 years.

Snow is expected in eastern Massachusetts tonight or early tomorrow and, if it falls at Nantucket, it may impede the emergency plane service that was established today.

The island was confronted with a serious shortage of bread, but this was relieved by three planes chartered by the First National Stores and the A & P chain, which carried supplies from the Boston airport.

All supplies from all providers by the John H. Shobe Company and police piloted the first to leave. These planes carried several hundred copies of the Boston Evening American.

A Nantucket pilot, David Faub, flew over the ice from the island to Falmouth and returned with yeast and 20 pounds of fish.

The island normally gets its daily supply of bread from the mainland by boat. There are only two bakeries at Nantucket and these Continued on Page 2, Column 4 ing up for extension of the existing temporary neutrality act. Johnson's action calculated to strengthen this feeling.

Senator Pittman (D), Nevada, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, nevertheless, hoped to win committee approval of the administration measure this week.

In the House the legislation has been reported by the foreign affairs committee, and may come up for debate Saturday.

In the Senate committee, there is a powerful group opposed to the permanent neutrality proposal, including Senators Borah (R), Idaho, Vandenberg (R), Michigan, and others.

UPON PRESENT LAW

Senator Thomas (D), Oklahoma, has introduced a proposal for extension of the present temporary law as a substitute. While this was originally proposed as a stop-gap to ease there was delay in action on the permanent plan, today there appeared reason to believe it may be carried over for another year.

Moore's denunciation of the administration plan, which leaves a large amount of discretion in the matter of embargoes other than actual munitions and implements of war, was a scathing document. He termed the permanent plan "fantastic," and expressed doubt there was any real, understanding sentiment in favor of the measure.

"We are told that six million women stand behind the pending bill," he said. "Not only do I believe this, but I venture to believe that, if the bill were properly explained to them, not six thousand would be found to support it."

Judge Moore said: "Taking the pending bill as a whole it is a curious blend of homicidal and suicidal mania, the execution of which rests exclusively in foreign hands."

"The homicidal mania glares in the proposal to try and starve other people who engage in war, the suicidal mania glares in the proposal to demoralize and destroy our commerce in order that people at war may not be nourished by what we produce."

"We are told that six million women stand behind the pending bill. Not only do I not believe that, but I venture to believe that, if the bill were properly explained to them, not six thousand could be found to support it."

"By the pending bill authority is properly conferred upon the President to use the embargo power for the purpose of shortening wars."

"This obviously would bring us fully into any war to which it was applied."

"I would not give this power to any man. I would prefer to decline it if it were offered to me, even though I happen to understand the law of neutrality, and to know what is and what is not neutral according to that law."

SETS UP DICTATOR

"The bestowal of such power would constitute the worst form of dictatorship ever set up."

"Taking the pending bill as a whole, with its misconceptions of law, its confusion of belligerent with neutral functions and its general incoherence, the more one studies it the clearer it becomes that it is, consciously or unconsciously, inspired by the thought of enabling the United States, in the name of peace and neutrality, to co-operate with the League of Nations, or with individual members thereof, in the coercive measures as they may see fit to adopt, whether under the title of 'sanctions' or of 'new war', for the purpose of enforcing peace."

Senator Johnson said he agreed 50 per cent with this appraisal of the neutrality bill.

Judge Moore, formerly a justice of the League of Nations Court and the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague and a member of many international conferences subscribed to the bill in only one particular. He said:

"As regards the impartial prohibition of the export of arms and ammunition or implements of war to belligerent countries, which is taken over from the neutrality resolution of last year,

I have no objection to make on legal grounds.

"My personal inclination has always been adverse to the prohibition, partly on the ground that it would operate to favor of big powers, which can afford to maintain great armament factories."

BOSSE DEATH SUSPECT HELD

police, announced, but said Mrs. Bosse had asked him to get it destroyed a horse and said he was unsuccessful in obtaining it. Police said his new story was this: That he and Mrs. Bosse were alone in her house a week ago yesterday, that she had said she was tired of living.

That he was sitting by the radio, that she went into the bathroom and that he heard her cry: "The devil!"

That he rushed in and found her lying on the floor, that he picked her up, half carried, half dragged her to her bed.

That she was breathing heavily and that in a few minutes she appeared to stop.

That he believed she was dead, that he rearranged rugs disturbed when he dragged her body, that he found a glass from which they had been drinking whiskey and put it in the sink.

That he became frightened and left the house and two hours and a half later called her husband at his club and told him his wife was depressed, advised him to go and see her.

That he called the husband that night and learned she was in New York. That he never obtained the police that she wanted any, that he told her his inability to get it and told him never mind, that she would get it.

The man held said that he was married, that he was in Australia and that he has a daughter who is who actress and now in New Jersey.

He was taken into custody Saturday at the South Station while about to board a train for New York. The arrest came as the result of a story told police by Jerome Magnifico, 32, of Chelsea street, East Boston, clerk in a pharmacy in Washington street, opposite Franklin street, in downtown Boston.

DRUG CLERK'S STORY

Today Magnifico picked the man out of a lineup of 33 prisoners at police headquarters and told this story regarding him:

"He came into my store on Monday or Tuesday two weeks ago about noon when the store was crowded."

"He said he had a horse he wanted to get rid of. I asked him why he didn't send it to the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. He said, 'No, I want something to kill him so he won't suffer. I don't like the way they do it.'"

"He asked for corrosive sublimate, a disinfectant and slow poison. I said, 'That's not deadly.' He said, 'How about cyanide?' I said, 'That's very deadly.' He said, 'Okay, let's have some.'"

"I told him we didn't handle it and that if we did I couldn't let him have it because it was too deadly."

"He said he had used the corrosive sublimate on horses with a syringe and found it very effective to kill them. He said he would get what he wanted where and when he went out."

On the night following the death of Mrs. Bosse, the clerk was in a newspaper story and picture but he waited until Saturday, not sure, before he related circumstances to his employers. They notified police.

This story, police said, the man in custody readily admitted.

Clifford Bosse went to headquarters to aid the authorities. He told them his wife had no horse on any farm, but he was a horse man.

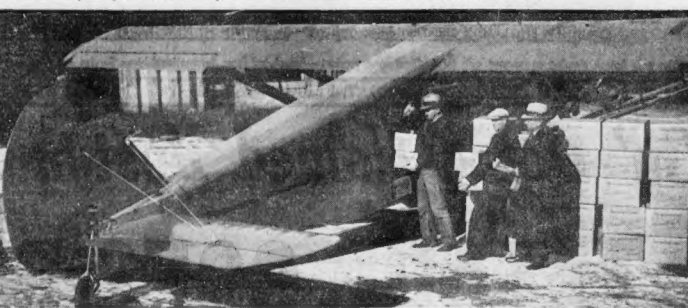

He said he did not know well the man held and said he did not think his wife was a victim of murder.

Food and Newspapers Delivered by Plane at Nantucket

Readers of the Boston Evening American in Nantucket will see the paper as usual today. A circulation department truck is shown at the plane just before the hopoff was made to the island.

Plans are being made today to get the Boston Evening American editions to the island each day during days which the ice-bound condition continues.

Airplanes will see to it that sufficient food is delivered to Nantucket while the isolation by ice continues. The First National Stores was leading a plane when this picture was made at the East Boston Airport. The trio representing the chain store in the photo are Thomas Madden, A. L. Dionne and W. J. Healy, traffic manager for the First National Stores. A few minutes later the plane was on its mission of food delivery.

With a goodly amount of foodstuff, this large plane was being loaded for Nantucket by the A. & P. stores.

School Salaries Seen Facing Slash

Wholesale reductions in school salaries are in the offing if the Legislature adopts a recommendation limiting school expenditures, Alexander M. Sullivan, business agent of the Boston school committee, today warned members of the legislative committee on municipal finance.

Sullivan was discussing the recommendations of the Boston Bureau that school expenditures be limited to $18,000,000.

"If the amount is limited to $18,000,000 it will be $1,400,000 less than appropriated last year," the speaker stated. "Every employee will lose $300 from his regular salary."

He suggested the committee withhold its decision until all school budgets are before them in detail, a matter of about 10 days' time.

In his opinion, the school year will call for about $17,500,000.

AL HAS COMMANDING LEAD IN POLL HERE TO DATE

New England still favors Alfred E. Smith over the "New Deal" in the Boston Evening American-Boston Sunday Advertiser balloting today. The "Happy Warrior" holds a commanding lead in the early voting, tabulation of which is being made.

Hundreds of New Englanders have already voiced their opinion on the ballots provided in these newspapers and each mail brings in another share of votes on the question:

"Who, in your belief, delivered the more convincing argument, Alfred E. Smith or Senator Joseph T. Robinson?"

In his now famous address at the Liberty League dinner in Washington, the former New York governor and Democratic presidential candidate in 1928, delivered a ringing denunciation of the administration and its "New Deal."

In answer to this speech, Senator Robinson of Arkansas spoke in praise of the Roosevelt administration and the "Deal."

The poll being conducted by the New York American, Smith had a 3 to 2 margin of lead over Senator Joseph T. Robinson, spokesman in Washington for the Roosevelt administration.

CURLEY Orders Jobs PROBE

"FEE RACKET" IS ALLEGED

Rumors and complaints that racketeers have sought to collect thousands of dollars for state jobs and liquor licenses in the name of Governor Curley are being probed by state police today.

Orders for the investigation were issued by Governor Curley, himself, he revealed from West Palm Beach, where he arrived last night in his vacation tour of Florida and Cuba.

The Governor declared such a collection racket had been existing so long on Beacon Hill that no one expected a state job without paying for it.

Warns Appointees

He said he had taken steps to halt it by warning all his appointees in advance that they were to pay no money to anyone for their positions.

"At City Hall," he declared, "I always summoned policemen and firemen before they were promoted or appointed and told them they were getting the jobs because they had earned them and warned them not to pay."

But the State House I have found it necessary to call in every appointee in advance, tell him he was appointed on merit and explain that he would be removed if he paid a cent to anyone."

$1000 "Fee" Paid

The Governor also confirmed a report that a mayor of a Western Massachusetts city complained that a man collected $1000 a year for a liquor license granted to a club.

Governor Curley said he wrote to the man in question, ordering him to return the money or go to jail. He said he later received word from the mayor that the matter had been settled.

"That is one thing I refuse to stand for," Governor Curley said. "I would not allow it at City Hall and I have refused to permit it to continue on Beacon Hill."

was visibly disappointed as the court concluded its decision day without mentioning the most important constitutional case now before it.

The next decision day on which the court may announce its ruling is February 10.

A number of decisions were handed down by the court including one which clarified the relationship between the federal and state governments.

The court held that Maryland may not restrict the sale of liquor to the Baltimore National Bank owned by the Reconstruction Corporation.

Other rulings included one which held that the kidnapping of an officer to avoid arrest was a violation of the Lindbergh law and one that permitted the hearing in both cases entitled holders of government covered insurance to benefit under their policies for total and permanent disability.

The court today also granted a review in which constitutionality of the securities law is assailed. The case is the seventh before the court this term in which validity of vital acts of the Roosevelt Congress is involved.

By the time the doors to the state chamber were opened, an hour in advance of the court's convening, the marble corridors were lined with would-be spectators.

Several hundred people were in a double line composed of the general public, while there was another lengthy double column of lawyers.

By the time the latter were admitted, there was little room left for the general public.

Among the early arrivals were former Governor and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania.

A seat was reserved for Mrs. Brandeis, wife of Justice Brandeis, James Lawrence Fy, general counsel of TVA, left the hospital where he was recovering from an operation to attend the session.

David Lilienthal, a member of the TVA board, also reached the chamber long ahead of time.

Representative Rankin (D-Miss.) chatted with Fy.

James M. Beck, former solicitor general, took one of the last seats in the front section reserved for attorneys and distinguished guests.

Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the present solicitor general, was ushered with two friends into seats held for guests of the justice.

Seats were at such a premium that court officials were hard pressed when unexpected notables arrived.

Every inch of standing room was taken.

COUPLE, WED ON ICE BLOCKS, ON DOG-SLED HONEYMOON

Hundreds of thousands of winter sports fans are resting up today after one of the greatest days of snow carnivals in all New England history.

All records on snow trains were shattered when the Boston & Maine carried 3064 persons from Boston, Worcester and Springfield to northern points.

Even the Blue Hills had a carnival of its own, the fourth annual event at St. Morris in the Blue Hills at Quincy. There Miss Edna Jones, 19-year-old Sunday school teacher at the Dudley Street Baptist Church, who lives in Mount Pleasant avenue, Roxbury, was acclaimed carnival queen while 35,000 cheered.

Her selection was made as the feature of a program of winter games which included speed and figure skating and ice jumping.

Before 10,000 persons gathered on the slopes of Carnival Hill in Wilton, N. H., the first "snow wedding" in the history of the Granite State was held with Governor H. Styles Bridges present at the ceremony.

In an altar of blocks of ice, the former Miss Betty LaGrasse, of Portsmouth, N. H., clad in a ski suit, was married to Francis Eastman and they were sent away on their honeymoon on a dog sled to the accompaniment of a barrage of snow balls in place of the usual rice and confetti.

Hundreds were turned away because of lack of parking facilities after more than 1000 had poured into Williamstown for the Williams College carnival on the slopes of Greylock.

The 15th annual carnival at Berlin, N. H., was featured by a 15-mile sledge dog race, with winning honors going to Clem McMoner and his team of huskies.

Peterboro, N. H., and Ayer were also scenes of winter sports.

10,000 Butchers on STRIKE

LONDON FACES 'MEAT FAMINE'

London, Feb. 3 (AP)—A sudden strike at the Smithfield Central Market halted the work of 10,000 men today and forced the world's largest meat market, selling upward of 8,000,000 persons, to an absolute standstill.

London and the greater part of southern England faced a possibility of meatless menus, while authorities feared the dispute would spread to all dock and railroad workers handling consignments for the Smithfield market.

The strike started at midnight, 4000 workers refusing to handle the meat and picketing all entrances. The dispute arose from workers' dissatisfaction over what they considered undue delay by a constitution board dealing with claims for higher wages.

Nightlong attempts at conciliation ended with an announcement that the parties were "hopelessly divided."

Hundreds of carcasses hung in the great market, but as pickets guarded the approaches, authorities said the meat seemed likely to remain there for the duration of the strike.

The police confronted a first-class traffic problem, with scores of heavy trucks jamming the narrow market streets long after the hours at which they were usually unloaded.

Fleets of other trucks, laden with carcasses, blocked adjoining streets, unable to discharge their loads. Strong reinforcements of police patrolled the neighborhood.

Three hundred cold storage men joined the original 4000 meat handlers in the strike early this morning. Nearly 8000 men were involved by dawn, and 6:30 a. m. 11:30 a. m. Eastern Standard Time found 10,000 men idle.

"If the strike lasts, London will be meatless," asserted H. W. Mill, market superintendent.

"I'd rather let the meat rot than give in," said one merchant. "We think we are a good mine, to be exploited."

Monday is normally the busiest day of the week at the Smithfield market, with about 3600 tons of meat waiting to be despatched throughout the city.

84 Pay $10 Fines In Gambling Raid

Eighty-four persons paid fines of $10 each today in East Cambridge court for being present where gaming implements were found, as a result of a raid last Saturday afternoon on the "East Cambridge Dramatic Club," in Cambridge street.

John P. (Packy) Walsh, alleged proprietor of the house and room, pleaded not guilty to three charges, but was found guilty by Judge Arthur P. Stone and fined a total of $200. He appeared.

The charges against him were setting up a lottery for money, keeping an establishment for registering bets and being present where gaming implements were found. He was held in bail of $120 for Superior Court.

FEEDING PET TOO MUCH OF A LUXURY FOR WAR VET

By LUTHER CONANT

There's an empty crib in one corner of the room. A couple of chairs, a table, and that's all.

The crib will be used again if seven-month-old Barbara ever comes back from the Boston Floating Hospital.

She's stricken there with pneumonia.

But there are still three other youngsters at home.

Three youngsters and a dog. A great, big, furry, affectionate Belgian police dog.

He's going to be sold. He's got to be sold because Herbert T. James of 280 East street, Roxbury, has his hands full feeding the children.

James is going to get a bonus next summer.

He was 14 when he entered the war. But right now that doesn't buy coal.

He was working on the WPA until November.

Then his heart got the best of him. The name trouble that started with the war.

The welfare people are doing the best they can. She has a leaky valve in her heart.

There was anything left over after feeding and housing and heating and clothing the youngsters and his wife, it would go for the dog.

But there isn't any left over. That shouldn't be too hard to understand.

"Buddy" is the dog's name. He'll stand perfectly still while Herbert, Jr., aged two, climbs on his back and "plays horse" with him by holding onto his shaggy eye coal.

He loves it when Helen—she's five—

FOLEY WON'T PRESS SCHUSTER CHARGE

District Attorney William J. Foley announced today he would take no action before the Suffolk County grand jury on the evidence presented to his office by Attorney Schuster in his behalf of Governor Curley.

The governor's case aimed at possible indictment of Winfield A. Schuster, a member of the executive council.

"When I became district attorney," said Foley today, "I announced that if anyone sought a complaint against a member of Massachusetts, unless the resident had filed the state, such complaint would have to be made in the lower court, where the person sought was against would have an opportunity of defending himself."

"This rule has been strictly adhered to and will continue to be, regardless of whom seeks an indictment against another."

What action, if any, Attorney Foley will take relative to Schuster's case will be determined when he declines to discuss the matter.

When Foley was informed of District Attorney Foley's decision, he said:

"Well, that isn't my understanding. I believe it when Mr. Foley tells me. I presented the evidence to Assistant District Attorney Frederick T. Doyle as of old he had been a very serious talk with Mr. Foley about the matter."

Foley, however, maintained that if Foley desired to seek a complaint he would have to do so in the lower court.

Last Thursday Governor Curley called on a group of prominent citizens, including Republican of Newbold, had joined a "do not buy" list, and had raised a fund of $100,000 toward that end.

VETS Rush for PAPERS

MANY AIDED ON BONUS

BY THE BONUS EDITOR

Twenty-five hundred veterans have already availed themselves of the special Bonus Application Office conducted by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser at 294 DEVONSHIRE STREET.

Thousands more are expected to throng the office this week. The American and Advertiser cannot certify the application, but it will help any veteran in filling out the blank.

Any shortcomings question arising will be answered at the office.

And the veterans have been wholehearted in expressing their thanks.

William A. Layne, veteran, of Concord, N. H., writes to the BONUS EDITOR:

Way Cleared

"Thanks to the Boston Evening American for all they have done to help us boys."

The American and Advertiser cannot certify the application, but it will help any veteran in filling out the blank.

Any shortcomings question arising will be answered at the office.

And the veterans have been wholehearted in expressing their thanks.

William A. Layne, veteran, of Concord, N. H., writes to the BONUS EDITOR:

"Your paper as always can obtain its place upon the highest pedestal of honor, for it was through the Boston Evening American that the great battle for the 'Soldier's Bonus' was won."

The Bonus Editor heard some more thrilling stories today of the "murder" of the bonus payment is going to work early next summer.

George Hoffman of Saugus has never bothered on his certificate. And he's mighty glad that he has a time.

For next summer he's going to pay off an important mortgage installment and a doctor's bill which has worried him for quite a time.

Louis Conlin of Dorchester has wanted to buy some much needed glasses for himself and his wife. But they were costly.

Now Conlin sees the way clear to getting them. He has written to the Veterans' Bureau at the Federal Building and Veterans' Organization, Post Office Box 100, the state reported a post office "bureau" in the distribution of applications.

Joseph Hall, commander of Post 600, Veterans of Foreign Wars, requests the Bonus Editor to announce that East Boston veterans may now obtain their blanks at 18 Kensington street, East Boston.

Maine in Revolt
Over Raw DealGOVERNOR BRANN BESOUGHT
TO BE A CANDIDATE

(This is the second of three articles on the fate of the Raw Deal in Maine as indicated by a Boston Evening American survey. The first appeared in yesterday's Boston Sunday Advertiser. Why President Roosevelt and Jim Farley are worried about their future in Maine the coming election; why Governor Brann rebuked their policies and quit them, and the reaction behind the political scene will be told.)

By BEN GERSHON

(Boston Evening American Staff Writer)

Augusta, Me., Feb. 3.—Wires between the White House and the gilded dome state capitol here are burning day and night.

The wires are burning with pleas from Jim Farley, Centurion of the Raw Deal, and the little cabinet of the Brain Trusters.

The pleas directed to Governor Louis J. Brann, who wobbled his hands of the Raw Deal because he didn't agree with its policy, Centurion Farley is beseeching Brann to reconsider his stand not to seek a third term for Governor, which he can get, even though it would establish a precedent.

Farley is asking Brann, through intermediaries, to stand up for the United States Senator, for Congressman, for anything, so long as he runs for something.

Brann Means 'No'

Just so that Brann's powerful vote-getting capacity will once again swing the Democratic side of candidates and the Raw Deal back into office.

But Governor Brann, calm and tight-lipped, is adamant. He is saying "no" and he means it. He told Farley so recently at several "harmony" meetings in Washington, after they previously told Brann he wasn't welcome at the White House any more. But they didn't believe him.

Brann can't chide Brann from his mind's eye Farley's act in removing him as dictator of federal patronage in Maine, and giving the party to Congressman Carl Moran, after all Brann had done for the party.

Farley's Fear

The brain of the President and the little cabinet of Raw Dealers are worried is that their scouts, hastily dispatched to the potato state, have made disquieting reports.

They have reported that without Brann, the Raw Deal is in for a cold and rough deal in September and November.

They have reported that, according to unbiased and indisputable facts and figures, Republicans will achieve an overwhelming victory in state, Congressional and Presidential elections this year.

And that Brann could and would be elected, if he chose to seek re-election.

If Maine goes Republican, and the crystal says it will, the result may have an initial effect on the fate of the nation. That is the fear of Farley and his associates. His law partner, Peter Lescage of Lewiston, that he is through and is going back to replenish his depleted finances by resuming his law practice.

Despite Brann's refusal to reconsider, Farley has impounded Fred H. Lescage, Democratic state chairman, to exert his influence on Brann to run for some office.

Opening Gun

The Republicans, gloating over prospective victory, have started into action. They will start the campaign tomorrow night in Lewiston with a big meeting. Ex-United States Senator George H. Moses and ex-Chief Justice William R. Patterson of Maine will be speakers.

Meanwhile eyes of the state are focused on the fight for congressional seats. Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., Republican, is expected to win the victory by leaders of both parties in the senatorial contest.

In the first district, Congressman Simon M. Hamlin, it is reported, has authority will not run again unless Brann runs.

Moran in Fight

The Republicans who will go out for it are Raymond Oakes, member of the executive council; William H. Blais, who served two terms in the House and Senate; Thomas E. Ballantine, brother of Tom Reed; Roland Bridges, brother of Governor Charles C. Dyer; and former Congressman Donald R. Partridge.

Congressman Moran will seek re-election in the second district. His G. O. P. opponent will be Zelma M. Dwinell, Hodgdon C. Russell, Arthur B. Lescage, Roy E. Leach, Leachman and L. True Spear and several of them Town and country.

Congressman Ralph O. Brewster, Republican, will be a candidate in the third district and will be re-elected.

Another reaction against the Raw Deal is the prediction that the Republicans will increase their control in the State Legislature, gaining back the voice they lost last time. And at the same time, they will wipe out the Democratic minority which now controls the two-thirds vote.

(The third article on Maine's reaction to the Roosevelt regime and the voluntary retirement from politics of Governor Brann as the result of his raw deal with the White House, will be told in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

Gifford Assails
Wallace on "Steal"

Washington, Feb. 3 (INS).—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace was assailed today by Rep. Gifford (R.) of Massachusetts for his declaration that the $200,000,000 government tax refund is the "greatest legalized steal in history."

"The fact is that the big industries are refunding processing taxes to their customers," said Gifford.

"Actually all of the big textile mills in New England have been selling for months on an agreement to turn over to their customers any refunds of processing taxes."

"I am informed by an official of the largest mill in the world that they were writing checks as fast as they ran, returning processing tax to their customers."

"The statement of Secretary Wallace is wicked. It is dangerous. He ought to know the mills have sold goods on promise to give the processing tax to customers if they get anything back from the government."

Rep. Tracey (R.) of Massachusetts, declared last week Wallace should be impeached for his criticism of the high court.

Five other members of the crew, blown clear of the wreckage, were reported by radio to have been picked up last yesterday by the Romanica, another purse-seiner.

Arm Dislocated
As Man Sneezes

When Duncan Anderson of Palm Beach, South End, feels a sneeze coming on again, he will in all probability assume a stiff posture.

Anderson dislocated his shoulder while sneezing, and had to go to City Hospital to have his arm strapped into place.

Daily Tax Fact

By R. C. FORBES

"Instead of financing the billion dollar deficit of 1931 in the usual manner, our government simply absorbed that much of the lending capacity of banks, and, by so much, impaired the credit available for business."

In 1931 our government absorbed the lending capacity of banks to the amount of $4,000,000,000.

The statement who was an alarmed over that situation was none other than Franklin D. Roosevelt, author of the quotation which opens this article.

He then (1932) uttered this warning: "Our federal extravagance and impudence have a double evil effect, our people and our business cannot carry its excessive burden of taxation; second, our credit structure is impaired by the unorthodox financial measures necessary by these deficits."

Today, instead of carrying $4,000,000,000 government obligations, our banks, after three years of Franklin D. Roosevelt in the White House, are stuffed with no less than $10,000,000,000 government obligations.

If Franklin D. Roosevelt was alarmed in 1931, can he sleep at night now?

Girl Saves Boy
As Sled Sinks

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 3 (AP).—The quick action of Lovell McKinnon, 18, was credited today with saving one of two small boys, snatched from a dog sled as it sank in the icy waters of Trout Lake, carrying the driver with it.

Miss McKinnon, skating on the lake, saw the dog sled go through thin ice. She raced to the spot and pulled Clarence Beaver, 7, out of the water. Frank Turner, 23, another skater, saved Gordon Wells, 6, John J. Beaver, 7, and the driver, drowned.

Wildlife Leaders
Open 5-Day Parley

Washington, Feb. 3 (AP).—General hundred conservation leaders opened a five-day North American wildlife conference today. A message from President Roosevelt and a recital of the wildlife "crisis" by Jay N. Darling, former chief of the biological survey, were chief features of the day's program.

The conference was called to formulate a national wildlife program for Mr. Roosevelt and to organize a national federation of all groups dealing with game and fish problems.

Airplane Drops
Food for Birds

Westboro, Feb. 3 (AP).—Game Warden James A. Dick of Westboro, is feeding his feathered charges from an airplane.

Westboro pilots flew low over snow-drifted wooded areas, fields and meadows yesterday to drop mixed grains in Peck game birds. They distributed 60 pounds of grain.

The flocks that saw several flocks of quail and pheasants and later found them devouring the food.

Blast in Home
Burns Brothers

Armedonia, Feb. 3 (AP).—His brother Ralph, 19, suffered burns yesterday in the explosion of a blowtorch they were using to thaw out a frozen water pipe in the cellar of their home in Summer at East Boston.

Armond was treated at the East Boston Relief Hospital for burns on his face and right hand; Ralph for burns on his face. Then the brothers were able to return home.

A fire alarm was sent in, right after the explosion but no fire damage was reported.

36,760 More Quit
CCC to Take Jobs

Washington, Feb. 3 (AP).—Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, said in a report published today that the number of men leaving the corps to take private jobs in 1935 showed a 36,760 increase over the preceding year.

The total for the past year was placed at 151,065, compared with an enrolled strength varying from 36,000 to 367,000.

Vegetables Strew
Artery After Crash

Carrots, turnips, squash and other vegetables decorated the Northern Artery at Washington report published today that the street, Somerville, today, when a farm produce truck driven by Chester Schultz of North Reading, on its way to market, was in collision with the much larger truck of Wesley Carwell of Steadman street, Jamaica Plain.

The smaller truck was thrown on its side but the driver was not injured.

84TH BIRTHDAY

Eighty-four years ago this month Leopold Morse, U. S. Congressman, founded Leopold Morse Company and instituted our policy of value giving and fair dealing which has been, we feel, the reason for our uninterrupted growth. Through the terms of 20 Presidents, three wars, panics and boom times we have gone steadily on — growing rich in friendship, wise in experience, mellow with years—but retaining that spirit of youth that is the essence of progress.

Today, a great factory, two Boston stores, a University Shop in Cambridge, and a dozen stores throughout New England carry on the Morse tradition.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FARFAX

IT IS quite evident that red hair will be the vogue for the Spring and Summer. We have never seen more enthusiasm expressed over any change in beauty styles.

Thousands of girls have already changed to the fascinating shade and you may be sure before the Summer is here, there will be an endless variety of these lovely tian beauties.

Hot Plate

Urbana, Mo., Feb. 3 (AP)—R. Gattiloff lifted the lid on his stove to see how the fire was getting along.

Some cables blew into his throat. He coughed. Out popped his false teeth into the fire.

When the stove nature of the Express was warmed before applying use a granite or porcelain plate that is not chipped as the iron may discolor the henna. Heat the mixture almost to the boiling point, but do not boil it as it will spoil the effect of the coloring.

The hair must be shampooed, thoroughly rinsed and dried before putting on the paste. Bobbed hair, when done for the first time, should be covered with the paste, but long hair is done only once, half way down the head. When the top part is thoroughly covered the ends are done. The ends respond to the treatment quickly and that is the reason for doing them after the hair is closer to the scalp.

You may have the Henna Plate Method with the charge, Address: Donna Grace, in care of the Boston Evening American and ask a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

Women Cannot Afford to Gamble Time or Emotions On Matrimonial Dupes

By BEATRICE FARFAX

THE MAN who trifles with a woman's love is courting disaster.

Platonic love is the invention of matrimonial swindlers. The bachelor who wastes the best years of a woman's life and then gets the idea he can toss her aside like last summer's hat should be tarred and feathered. He is a scoundrel who has defiled what should be the noblest, most sacred thing in life.

A man can afford to throw away time, but women can't. His chances for marriage are just as good at 40 as they were at 20. Ours, they are even better.

A woman is not so fortunate. Two score years and she's a spinster, and Old Maid or whatever else you want to call her. Younger and prettier women are snapping up the matrimonial bargains. Life has largely passed her by.

There's nothing disgraceful about being an Old Maid. Thousands of women prefer the single state and a great many of them are just as happy as any wife will ever be. But the woman who became an Old Maid, not through preference, but because of the desert of the man she thought loved her does not belong in this category.

Forty finds her looking back. She accuses me of wasting the best years of her life. Let me say here that during all the years of our friendship I carefully avoided the subject of matrimony and took it for granted that she felt the same way. I did.

We were pals—nothing more. We both enjoyed the same things and had much in common. Friendly, I had no intention of being married. I have a good home, a wonderful mother and fine sister. I'm perfectly happy. I'm a confirmed bachelor.

Now, Miss Fairfax, why can't a woman look at things in a womanlike way the same as a man does? Here is my friend who has her eye out for a nervous wreck of herself because she's not married. She is even going so far as to threaten to make trouble for me.

Indeed, I know that she really wants a husband, she can get one anytime, for she is very attractive. I don't look upon her as a woman, but as a man does. Here is my friend who has her eye out for a nervous wreck of herself because she's not married. She is even going so far as to threaten to make trouble for me.

I don't see why a girl wants to marry a man who doesn't want to be married. But don't get the idea that I gave this girl the "rally." No, I am perfectly willing to keep on as we were.

Yesterday wrote me a letter saying that, although she loves me, she is going to make plenty of trouble for me. Can you believe that?

I really would like to hear from you. What do you think of such a situation?

F. L. R.

MY DEAR SIR:

I have already told you what I think of you. I hope you profit by it.

My heart goes out to the poor girl who has believed in you. I hope in the whole year she has not been so much in love with you as she is now.

At least, I hope so. I hope my readers will write me about your letter. Probably they'll help me to give you the spanking you deserve.

Those With Excess Blood Cells

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

WE often hear of persons having too little blood, but what about those having too much blood?

A sufferer from "Vague" disease, or "polythemia," as it is sometimes called, has a ruddy complexion. That is the only sign at first.

In the beginning there is no discomfort and on this account it is often overlooked for a considerable time. As the disease progresses, the skin of the face, chest, nose and ears take on a peculiar mottled appearance. The patient begins to complain about difficulty in breathing and a feeling of weakness after exertion.

There may be some neuralgic pains, headache, frequent attacks of mild digestive disturbance. Bloating of the nose, stomach and intestines sometimes occur.

In this disease there is found an excess in number of red blood cells. This may be as much as 40 to 50 per cent. The normal average blood count is around three and a half million red blood cells in each cubic millimeter of blood. In Vague's disease it may be as high as six to eight million red blood cells.

Dr. Copeland is glad to answer inquiries from readers who send addressed stamped envelopes with their questions. All inquiries should be addressed to him in care of this newspaper.

WHITE HOPE' HYSTERIA RETURNS

AUSTEN LAKE

Sharkey Asks For Another Helping: Shucco Dishes It Up

THE INCOMPREHENSIBLE Jack Sharkey, whose chief charm during the years has been his knack as a common fist fighter than his talent for the eccentric and unconventional, will exhumate the body next Friday night at the Boston Garden for another macabre whirl.

In this one the male Garbo of the prize ring will meet a tough, Class Sub-A heavyweight named Tony Shucco, who enjoys a local name for having hacked down many a good career-bully in the Class B series.

The evening's business may not set any new records for scientific slaughter, but the dramatic probabilities, as always when Sharkey fights, are unlimited, with the chance, if the thing goes past the fifth round, that he will eat quantities of leather and, maybe, snuffle some ether.

Franchise of his past record for creating elaborate problems in his fights, Sharkey, even now in his faded twilight, has a strong magnetic appeal to the fight crowd and particularly students of ring games.

The only writing trace, and especially those who hunt the black-belt books from which columns are fashioned, are inclined to look for many quaint and bizarre episodes which help to make the profession such a goofy delight.

And the fight referees, who were assigned to his bouts, always came prepared to act as keepers, nurses or governesses and, in emergency, to treat him much as a tactful spouse might treat a hysterical helpmate.

Scott's Screams Came Second

IN HIS MATCHES WITH Harry Wills and Jack Delaney, both of which went to his credit, he surrendered to spasms of frayed nerves and to weeping like a melancholic alcoholic who found himself in the town jug.

During his battle with Philip Horizontal Scott, the collapsible L. Scott, he fired a volley of stomach shots which tumbled Scott to the floor with his mittens pressed to his middle and yelling for a physician.

Then Sharkey, without waiting, had burst into a screaming tantrum which was only stopped by Referee Lou Magnolia inviting him to operate on Scott more, while suggesting that he hit him somewhere above the neck, because British fighters were notoriously high-winded and inclined to regard any blow beneath the shoulders as in the rough.

Magnolia confessed later that he elected the lesser of two evils in the belief that Scott would choke less if hit below his plumed or waterline, than Sharkey would if not permitted to chop him down again.

And of the two morose, pale-eyed parties, he would rather hear Scott's slightly absent-minded, also screams than Sharkey's bass rumbles which seemed to well up from the innermost parts of his indignation.

Wills Legislated Out

THE BOUT IN WHICH SHARKEY established himself was the one with Harry Wills, the Negro, who at the time was regarded as a serious menace not the kind of person a champion like Jack Dempsey would be wanting any dealing with.

This was won, or voted to Sharkey, on a technical nicety in boxing law, which was a defunct rule known as the hitting-while-holding rule. And though, by general consent, it existed only in a treacherous or capricious way, it was removed for the evening, as a means to dignify the dark man and return him permanently to the shelf.

Though since then all before, many fighters have clamped an opponent's arm or an arm pit or elbow and flogged away with the first fat, rotting Max Baer, Max Schmeling and Primo Camera and all the present line of heavyweights except Joe Louis, nobody was ever disqualified or any more than warned for the offense.

It seems logical that, had Wills been allowed the same scope as Baer, Schmeling and Carnera and others of paler complexion and stronger connections, Sharkey might have been to some pains to beat him.

But at the moment there was many political parties in Manhattan which viewed the black man as an alarming civil issue and were quite willing that he was removed by a convenient clause in the ring statutes.

Carnera Was Nonplussed

THERE WAS ALSO THAT MOONLIGHT June evening in 1933 when Sharkey was leading Harry in a fighting briskly with apparent purpose until he had the ex-curious out in a befuddled state where he stood trying to recall what the little lesson book said about situations like this.

Presently Carnera, who was always more comic than ferocious and had a disturbing way of rolling back his lips like a horse being fed apples, wrestled Jack in a neutral corner and tagged him with a short right to the jaw.

And, though he was leading Harry to look sufficient to do the damage, Sharkey sagged down like a child's doll whose knee-caps had come loose, and he lay with his chin rattled in the hollow of a shoulder while the referee, finding him unable to service and his handlers hauled him to his corner where, shortly, he revived from his faint.

May Be Closing Chapter

AFTER HIS LATELY DEFEAT by King Levinsky and Tommy Loughran, Sharkey announced that the pleasure of living with his sight and brain centres unimpeded outweighed the risk of matrimony, and he would retire. But lately, man as an animal, it is usually a relic of the opposite sex, he changed his mind and decided he would resurrect himself for a few more fights.

Which is where the "Unknown" Winston affair, last November 23, came in when the black felled up under an abuse to his jewels and went into pinnate convulsions as the canvas. By Sharkey's own request the commission had him picked up, dusted off, and put back into circulation.

So Winston presently suffered another fit, which was certified as authentic as far as Jack went but a fraud on the black's part. That brings us up to next Friday night, and the prospect of seeing another dramatic chapter written into the record and one which may write the final line of a real life romance stranger than fiction.

Boxing Cycle Returns to "White Hope" Search

Runyon Reviews Old Search

Willard, Spurned, Came on

To 'Save Race'

By Damon Runyon

Joe Louis, football's phenomenal "brown bomber," already being held as the next world champion, is inspiring the greatest quest for a "white hope" since Jack Johnson lorded it over the championship while promoters hunted him and you for a white boxer who could beat him.

In a series of articles of which this is the first, Damon Runyon, peer of America's sports writers, tells with characteristic boldness of this new search for a "white hope" and of other similar quests that have made spectacular chapters in the history of boxing.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 3.—We have at this time an astounding and unprecedented situation in fistiana.

It seems to be generally accepted, as an absolutely foregone conclusion that Joe Louis, "The Brown Bomber," will win the heavyweight title from James J. Braddock when they meet next fall.

Let me say right here that I cannot wholly subscribe to this theory for reasons that I will explain in detail later on.

But there it is. So a nation-wide quest is already in progress for a white fighter to lick Louis after "The Bomber" becomes a champion.

The boxing game is seeking a new "white hope."

The term goes back to the days when the burly Negro, John Arthur Johnson, a former cock-walker from Galveston, Texas, had achieved recognition as heavyweight champion of the world by beating Tommy Burns, and they hailed a retired champion, James J. Jeffries, out of his retirement and hailed him as the hope of the white race.

Considered Johnson's Rise a Calamity

The sport writers of those days had gradually developed the impression throughout the country that the occupancy of the heavyweight throne by a Negro was a great calamity, and that unless Johnson was ousted, the white race was totally lost.

I believe the white race is much calmer about those matters nowadays.

So many handomies have held the heavyweight title of recent years that the white race manages to restrain any great emotion over the prospect of a great black gladiator succeeding to the throne.

But it was different twenty-five years ago.

Johnson, a magnificent defensive boxer, with his golden grin and his lordly manner and his pale-face wives, was deemed an affront to the Caucasians.

The white folk worked themselves up into an awful ferment over his heavyweight kingship.

When, with many sarcastic cracks, Johnson knocked Jeffries back into his retirement, the whole country was dreadfully upset, and pugilistic managers and promoters all over these United States went scurrying around, trying to dig out of their trenches, and showing them into gymnasiums to be educated to lick Jack Johnson.

Very big money that crawled through the ring ropes thereafter was the "hope of the white race," and this period became known as the "white hope era."

But Johnson was a champion and a victor, and the victor is the one who is responsible for a nation-wide hysteria, which is what the "white hope era" amounted to.

The pugilistic managers and promoters know they can make money by arousing racial resentment, and the fact that already the to-morrows of ballyhoo are beating through the fustian purges indicates the drift.

If Louis wins the big title, you can bet all the beans in Boston we will be white-bored to death.

I can guarantee one immune from the next "white hope" episode, however, and that is yours truly.

I was not a native participant in the last "white hope era," purely as an altruist, interested in the welfare of the Caucasian, and I never got so sick and tired of anything in my life as I did of human beef, and brown, and ivory.

Jack Johnson, once the boxing director of Madison Square Garden, and I ran several "white hope" tournaments like those that are in progress in various sections.

But you can't tell. When Jack Johnson was a lean, hungry little boy, laboring in training camp for his meals, and fighting whatever

Next Saturday will be a big sport for Northeastern pugilists.

At McCoy's variety baaseters are scheduled to face Lowell "Practical" winning club at the Boston Garden.

The freshman quintet will meet Huntington.

The variety track team will have a full delegation prepared for the A. A. games at the Garden, while a small group of freshmen will also participate in the games the whole team will travel to East Rutherford in the afternoon for a dual meet.

TWO GREAT heavyweights of the past who could certainly make it tough for Joe Louis after "The Bomber" becomes a champion. Left, Jim Jeffries, and Tom Sharkey.

JIM JEFFRIES jogging along the cornucopia trail for his battle with Jack Johnson as a "White Hope" in 1910. Jeff's six-year retirement made him a cinch for the colored champ.

WALLACE Seeks National SKATING TITLE

New York, Feb. 3.—Champions of the ice are gathered here today for the finals in the New York Ice Skating Club's annual Skating Championships.

Wallace was close to record time in his two-mile victory, and the Dartmouth student from California is a very definite threat for the national title.

Tonight's races are expected to pack the Garden as there is more interest in speed skating this winter throughout the country than ever before.

At the Boston Silver Skater Derby the crowd throughout the day was estimated at 10,000. This crowd is typical of the large numbers who have been flocking to the ice carnivals all through the North.

Wallace Third At Bear Mountain

Bear Mountain, N. Y., Feb. 3.—George Wallace of Dartmouth, Boston Evening American Skating Sunday Advertiser Silver Skater winner, finished in a tie for third place here in the intermediate speed skating championships.

The event was won by Dick Warner of the Blue Bird Skating Club with a time of 70 minutes. Warner won the 400 and finished second in two other races.

Cliff Farrington of Stamford, Conn., was second in 60 minutes, while Wallace, with 40, gained a tie with Joe Sires of New York.

Wallace won the two-mile race and finished third in the 400.

GROVE'S Arm in Great SHAPE

New York, Feb. 3 (AP)—Bob (Lefty) Grove, of the fire ball and the sun-creased face, says his arm is the whip of old and that American League batsmen can expect plenty of speed when he is on the mound this year.

The lanky southpaw, who won 20 games for the Boston Red Sox last year, says his arm has fully recovered from the soreness that bothered him so much two years ago, and that he is ready for full and fancy duty with the team that already is reckoned with when people talk of late September.

Grove isn't making any extravagant predictions as to where the Red Sox will land, with the influx of their new and expensive talent, but he guarantees that the outfit will be a fighting one and a happy one.

In town for the annual dinner of the New York Journal-American last night, Grove said the Red Sox need to get working as a unit.

As for their being a happy family, he said the pitcher has no doubt that the team will be a great one, and that Johnny MacQueen, the husky pitcher, and Roger (Doc) Cramer, the outfielder, both bought from the Athletics in recent trades, will be in it, that there never is a dull moment in tea.

Grove was high in his praise of Tommy MacQueen of Philadelphia, who has been treating his sore arm over since Miller introduced them a couple of years back.

MacQueen Big Help

Grove says that MacQueen, a Southpaw whose whole career is the ring of his home, did some fearful things with his arm, twisted it around like a dish rag until Lefty thought all of the bones had been broken, mashed it and rubbed it raw, but he didn't quit.

The result, however, was more than Lefty expected. He says the arm was much better than it did at this time last year—and that he has learned a lesson from it.

Grove says there is no mental race between him and MacQueen, but that he has learned a lesson from it.

B. A. A. Meet Trophy Awards Named After Noted Figures

Three New Ones This Year

By Murray Kramer

Famed sportsman and athletic heroes of yesterday often have their names perpetuated through memorials such as buildings, trophies and whatnot. Yet, as the years pass and new generations come to the fore, these names seem to lose their significance.

To old timers around Boston, the Briggs Trophy is the most significant. To the younger of today they are little more than names.

The Briggs Trophy is in memory of Major Frank H. Briggs, one of the finest sportsmen in Boston's athletic history. The Major was chairman of the M. J. T. Athletic Council for years, and also Graduate Treasurer of the New England Athletic Association.

The first Briggs Trophy went into commission in 1921 with the stipulation that any individual, club or college winning the dash

He Could Go It

three times would take permanent possession.

Loren Murchison won the first cup in 1925. The second cup is still at large but both Harvard and Holy Cross have two legs on it.

Then there is the famed Hunter Mile, named after George L. Hunter, one of the guiding lights behind the old B. A. A. The present Hunter cup is the fifth.

The Irish American A. C. of New York won the first, thanks to the excellent running of Abe Kiviat, while the next three went to the Illinois A. C. because of Joe Ray and Ray Conner.

The John J. Hallahan Memorial Trophy, which is awarded annually to the individual who by his performance, competitive spirit and sportsmanship shall be deemed the outstanding athlete at the games, carries the name of a late Boston sports writer who for years was acknowledged to be an authority on track.

Hunter Mile Is Oldest Event

In addition to these three trophies, three more are being offered this year for the first time. There will be the James B. Hollis 800, the Lapham 1000 and the Billings 2 mile.

The Hollis trophy is being given personally by James B. Hollis, who is vice-president of the B. A. A. and one of Boston's leading business executives.

Henry G. Lapham is, of course, a famous name here. Mr. Lapham, who is a former president of the B. A. A. is now president of the Boston Garden and the Boston Arena. He has always been a keen follower of sports, along with being the donor of the famed Lapham Field House at Yale, which was erected at a cost of $3,000,000.

The Billings Trophy is a memorial to the late Col. George B. Billings, who was the first B. A. A. athletic committee chairman, and immigration commissioner of the Port of Boston for 15 years. Col. Billings was for years considered one of the nation's foremost authorities on amateur sport.

With this background and tradition, aided by many track and field stars of today, the B. A. A.'s 47th annual meet at the Boston Garden next Saturday night looms as a great success.

'IRISH' Have Field Alone TONIGHT

The Irish-American A. A. will present its weekly amateur boxing show in the Arena tonight with an extra incentive for the 'ads who punch it out for prizes.

The New England A. A. U. will accept winners of tonight's and next week's Irish-American A. A. shows to enter its annual championships in March.

All winners tonight will qualify for the New England title and will not have to compete in any sectional eliminations.

Last week the Irish-American A. A. put on an abbreviated show because many of the original entrants competed in an amateur tournament at Marlboro the same night.

Tonight, however, the program will be the full 180 pounds.

Among the outstanding battles listed are Dominic Salvati of East Boston, Gerald Hall of Braintree, Bob Blaney of Wakefield, Jimmy McCarron of Somerville, Ralph Cooper of Beverly, George Martin and Jackie Caparelli of Boston and Roy Kelly of Brookline.

Santa Handle

Los Angeles, Feb. 3.—The partial annual hands at Santa Anita race track for the first 34 days totaled $12,468,775. At the same date last year, the figure was only $6,044,302.

U. S. Six Beaten

Düsseldorf, Germany, Feb. 3.—The United States Olympic hockey team was defeated, 2 to 1, here by the same German team it defeated the day before.

Gloomy Gil Dobie

By Will Connell

A dean of the football coaching profession brings 14 years of coaching experience to the University Heights when Gilmore Dobie assumes the head coach's mantle this spring at Boston College.

A spare, lean figure of a man, Dobie carries his 27 years lightly, yet etched in his features by the years of many seasons of bitter battling are lines that tell the story of his career better than any words.

From the depths of public school sports obscurity to the heights of athletic and coaching fame, he has won the New England coach.

Close to three decades of success as a football pilot wrote a story of notable achievement in the state of national sports life. Coach 1890, and a five-year plan of disaster plotted by the gridiron gods went into action.

Dobie's 1890 career failed to win a major game, though it tied a weak Columbia team, at all, and though his Cornell contract had two years to run it was an oddball bet that he would be tagged out at Ithaca.

So you see, "Gloomy Gil" has had a complete coaching life. Success and failure have been stamped on his record of wins and defeats. His complete experience makes him a logical choice to face completely any problems the Boston College position may bring.

Dobie was born at Hastings, Mich. Jan. 31, 1879, and from the Hastings schools went to University of Minnesota, where he earned football and baseball fame. He completed the crowning of the carnival Queen, Edna Jones of 35 Mt. Pleasant avenue, Roxbury, who received the Gov. James M. Currier trophy from Mayor Thomas B. Morgan in Quincy.

BOSTON'S BIG LESSON IN BUSINESS

Industries in twenty-four states have become associated with the Made in America Club, Inc., which maintains headquarters at 40 Lexington Avenue, New York City, and has launched a widespread "BUY AMERICAN" movement.
